Checklist for sworn translations

1. Is the source document the original or a certified copy of the original?
2. If not an original, have the full details of the origin of the source (e.g. photocopies of court proceedings, electronic sources) been given in the translation as well as in a covering letter?
3. Does the translator's stamp, date and signature appear on each page of the sworn translation? (Refer to the SATI manual for the exact requirements)
   - Your full names
   - Sworn Translator in [the language combinations that you may translate between]
   - Admitted to the [the relevant court's name] High Court of South Africa
   - Your registration (or case) number
   - Your contact address or telephone number (international format)
   - The words "Ex officio Commissioner of Oaths"
4. In a multi-page document, does the header contain the page number of that page and the total number of pages (Page X of Y), so that no other pages can later be inserted fraudulently?
5. If the source text ends before the end of a page, has a line been drawn under the translated text before entering the translator's stamp and signature to prevent information being fraudulently included later in that sworn translation?
6. Are all details of the source text correct and have they been checked at least twice, for example titles, names and ID numbers?
7. Does each page of the sworn translation resemble the text and layout of the source text as closely as possible? If not, is there a translator's note explaining this (for example, that it was not possible to fit all the text on one page)?
8. Has a covering letter been attached (if the client has requested one) and if so, does it contain your correct details?
